

ABSTRACT

An input-sensor-integrated liquid crystal display panel has a first substrate, a second substrate, and a liquid crystal layer. The first substrate has at least one pixel controlling circuit, and the second substrate has a touch-detecting circuit. A color filter layer is formed between the first and second substrates, and the liquid crystal layer is filled in space formed by the first and second substrates.